FOREWORD

The 1988 Election Financing Fact Book is published by the Washington State Public Disclosure Commission pursuant to its authority as contained in RCW 42.17.370(2) to publish reports and statistics concerning campaign financing so that such information may be fully disclosed to the public.

Material in this book is based on reports as filed by candidates and political committees, most of them unaudited. Every effort has been made to assure accuracy of calculations in compiling the statements in this book.

The state PDC reports due on January 10, 1989, showing activity through the last day of 1988, are included in this analysis. Any contributions or expenditures reported after that time are not included.

The lists of major contributors are derived from the reports filed by the candidates and initiative committees rather than from reports by the contributing entities.

CONDITION OF RELEASE

This publication constitutes a "list of individuals" prepared by the Washington State Legislature and may not be used for commercial purposes [see RCW 42.17.260(5) and AGO 1975 No. 15]. This list is provided on the condition and with the understanding that the person receiving it agrees to this statutorily imposed limitation on its use.

The Financing of Legislative Campaigns -- 1988

The 294 candidates for the Washington State Legislature in 1988 reported receiving more than $9,177,000 in campaign contributions. This sum included $409,000 carried over from previous campaigns and $238,000 of the candidates' own money. Other principal sources of legislative campaign dollars were the four legislative caucus campaign committees ($296,000) and other Democratic and Republican party organizations ($440,000).

Overall, political action committees contributed more than $3,000,000 to legislative races held in 1988. United for Washington, which gave $381,000, and the Washington Federation of State Employees, with $279,000 in contributions, again led their counterparts in the amount of money given to legislative campaigns.

The largest corporate contributor was The Boeing Company, which gave more than $102,000 directly to candidates.

The major contributors listed in this section are those who made contributions of $150 or more to any candidate. Over 10,000 such contributions were recorded, amounting to $6,451,000, or about 70% of the total that the candidates had available to spend on their campaigns. Approximately 55,000 contributions of under $150 provided candidates with $2,156,000.

Earmarked contributions -- usually made by political action committees to political parties for use on behalf of one or more specified candidates -- constituted nearly 10% of the total dollars received by legislative candidates in 1988. In compiling this Fact Book, every effort was made to attribute such contributions to the original source, rather than to the intermediary committee, but some exceptions may have occurred.

This section contains:

- Candidates for Washington State Senate -- 1988
- Candidates for State House of Representatives -- 1988
- Average Campaign Expenditures in 1988
- Five Most Expensive Senate Elections -- 1988
- Six Most Expensive House Elections -- 1988
- Contribution and Expenditure Comparison, 1976-1988
- Average Expenditure Comparison, 1976-1988
- Contributions of $150 or More to Candidates for State Senate (by district) and State House of Representatives (by district)

Political Action
Committees

Who Gave to the Major PAC Contributors

A relatively small number of committees provide a sizeable share of the funds raised by statewide and legislative candidates. These committees include state party organizations, legislative caucus committees, and political action committees (PACs) affiliated with corporations, trade associations, professional associations and employee organizations or unions.

In this section, an attempt is made to shed even more light on the sources of campaign financing by identifying those who gave to the big givers: those contributors who indirectly, through their contributions to PACs, parties and caucuses, played a significant role in financing candidates' campaigns. The 35 committees highlighted in this section were the most active in 1988 as measured by the dollars they provided legislative campaigns. Listed are those contributors who gave each committee $150 or more during the 1987-88 period.

Again, this section is devoted to committees, and does not focus on politically active corporations, unions or associations which have not formed committees. Many times, corporations use general fund money to make contributions. The Boeing Company, for example, is one of the largest campaign contributors, but it has not formed a PAC for Washington state elections. Similarly, the Washington Federation of State Employees -- another major funding source of campaigns -- uses internally transferred dollars to make its political donations. The Federation does not need to list its members as contributors because none gives above the identification threshold.

The committees whose major funding sources are shown in this section include:

The “Reverse”
Directory

The "Reverse" Directory: What It Is

The "Reverse" directory is an alphabetical listing of the names of those individuals and organizations which gave contributions to the 1988 campaigns totaling at least $5,000 or made donations to five or more separate political committees, including candidates. It's a directory that focuses on major contributors and who received money from them. The lists found in the foregoing sections of this Fact Book center on recipients and their respective sources of campaign funding.

The following pages show the contributor's name, the recipients' identities and the total amounts donated to each. A recipient's name was not included unless an aggregate of $150 or more was donated. The information was compiled from the contributor reports filed by candidates for state executive and legislative office as well as by the Democratic and Republican state parties, the most active political action committees and by committees supporting or opposing the state-wide ballot initiatives.
